

Run 2678

Normanby Hotel

Hares: Chardarse and Even Optus

The wet carpark of the hotel made me wonder if we were going to have one of those hard to find trails but the confident hares assured us that the rain was over by the start of trail laying. The rain did take a bit of heat out of the afternoon ...that was until Verbal turned up in red hot shoes, long socks and shirt. I was not the only one to notice Verbal's outfit as a similarly red dressed narcissistic woman across the carpark in red shorts and low cut blouse was seen to mouth in Verbal's direction "I know what I like ...and I like what I see. All lost on Verbal though as he contemplated the 100km bike ride to the Gold Coast in October. I thought with Radar standing beside him in an arm sling it would have been enough of a wakeup call about bike riding.

Hares did not mention impending hills but the pack was not listening and only wanted to know if Chardi had arranged a bar tab for his birthday.

Up Kelvin Grove Rd and into the QUT Teachers College. As we headed out of the college grounds Craft recalled how he volunteered for an emotional assessment at the college, thinking he would meet chics. They flashed various photos past him while measuring his blood pressure and heart beat. Rumour has it he was dropped from the research when he showed the same emotional response to female students and Merinos ! He says the equipment was faulty.

In the park the trail regularly departed the well-lit paths to enter dark gullies and then into the old golf club. Seems the well-heeled are still using the club house and not concerned about the recent red alert from the UN about using electricity. Not to be outdone the city put on a grand light show viewed from our regroup spot, allowing me to catch up to the pack. Optus provided plenty of grass running, his preferred terrain. Handjob left the runners at the walk trail while Craft was struggling after climbing the Main Range on the weekend and spent some of the run behind the pack. Not Mu. His competitive streak saw him overtaking Tinkerbelle at every opportunity. This desire to succeed increased after our boys spotted two fervent female joggers on the trail. Mu is on record for pushing poor Radar off his bike some weeks ago and CCTV is being investigated to ascertain if he was anywhere near Brengun before his fall. On a downhill run from the park (and probably on a shortcut) Mu hit a hidden curb and became airborne. Tinkerbelle ducked for fear of Mu landing on him. Bugs and Craft left him for dead and I saw him hobbling along the last km of the run.

On the noisy footpath outside the pub proper Fingers had to repeat a number of things so that the deaf old bastards could hear. We got the bit about the November 50th Anniversary Party because the words 'free food' were a certain way to extend a hounds' millisecond attention span.

Stand in Monk Pushup came prepared with a litany of sins carried out by the SCARE mob on the weekend. Driftwood's fussy shopping, JCs snoring, Mu's public profanities and Boxa's out of character ogling of someone's wife. Multiple had a turn on the ice for bad babysitting but all attention was on Fucknut's Best Man behaviour at Irish Joke's wedding. He could not remember the church name even though he said he was 'sober' that day. Things got suspicious when he said there were no photos of the Bridesmaids which is the same rule he applies to his hash procuring activities. What happens on wedding stays on wedding was his lame excuse. Enough evidence though to win the SOTW Award and maybe we will never find out why Irish had to take the SOTW garb on his honeymoon.

Run 8/10 checks kept the pack together

Circle 8/10

Free Beer 10/10 Thanks and Happy Birthday Max

Food looked sufficient. ***

Mu learns winning has its pitfalls

*** Unfortunately after being told there was a 45 min delay for the meals about half the pack were advised 30 mins later that the kitchen was out of pulled pork and they could have anything else for another long wait. VD got his pulled pork and can advise that those who missed out were in fact the winners!
